Inteck, Inc. has Established a Financial Management Services Division and Hires a New Director

DENVER, COLORADO, October 5, 2006. Inteck, an information technology (IT) consulting firm for the healthcare industry, now provides Financial Management Services with the appointment of Bruce Jacobs as Director of Financial Management Services.

Mr. Jacobs has over 30 years of progressively more responsible experience in the full range of Hospital Financial Management and Operations, including acting as an interim CFO.. He has spearheaded implementation of performance related financial measures in private and government hospitals and for health care insurers.

Improving the financial performance of a hospital requires recognition that healthcare institutions operate in a unique environment and has unique problems to solve. It is difficult to explain to board members why financial performance is not what it should or used to be. The problems plaguing health care require more than a technology silver bullet. They require the right technology combined with strategic planning, operations improvement, technology deployment, and ongoing support and education.

The Inteck Financial Management program consists of three phases. These are:

Phase I: Assessment to Identify and Implement Short and Long-term Solutions to Improve Revenue and Increase the Collection of Cash

Phase II: Optimizing Process and Use of Existing System and Technologies

Phase III: Acquiring and Installing New Technologies, if necessary

As Bruce Jacobs stated "This program fully pays for itself with the additional cash collected from the improvements. Inteck fully integrates system-wide satellite solutions, including; Hospital, Long-term care, Home Health, Clinic, and Charge master optimization." Optimizing financial performance in hospitals involves the integrated operation of many hospital functions and processes, which usually can be improved relative to a hospital's needs.
