Inteck offers “Top Reasons Why Your IT Budget Fails and What YOU Can Do About It!” White Paper

DENVER, COLORADO, November 17, 2005. Inteck, an information technology (IT) consulting firm for the healthcare industry has developed a white paper entitled “Top Reasons Why Your IT Budget Fails and What YOU Can Do About It! How to gain approval with an IT strategic plan.”

This paper defines the reasons and benefits every healthcare organization needs an IT plan now. An excerpt from it: “Every year chief information officers and information systems directors in hospitals around the country endure the same ritual – the submission of a budget they know will be among the first reduced to achieve the desired bottom line. IT leaders know ahead of time the result. The new server will have to wait. The replacement of five-year-old desktops running an operating system that is no longer supported by the manufacturer cannot be done until next year.”

This white paper is free to the public and can be obtained by emailing info@Inteck-Inc.com or visiting www.Inteck-Inc.com/stratplanwp.htm.

Written by Jeff Kerber, Manager of Inteck’s General Consulting Practice; Mr. Kerber has more than 15 years of healthcare IT experience. He has experience in software selection and implementation projects for a multiple hospital system, developed customer support for a medical practice management software and electronic insurance program and implemented a comprehensive HIPAA compliance program for an integrated delivery system. Mr. Kerber has a Bachelor of Science Degree in Business Administration with concentration in Management Information Systems from the University of Texas at Dallas.
